Father Paul's Reflections on the Readings

31st Sunday in Ordinary Time

In today's Gospel reminds us that when Zacchaeus was wealthy, he had lost his God, but when he detached from his wealth, he found his God. Zacchaeus is described to us with two qualities that define his past life very precisely. He is 'a tax collector and a wealthy man'. To meet Jesus, he has taken some extra effort to get a clear vision of Jesus – he ran to get ahead of the crowd and secondly, he climbed the tree. If Jesus needs to do miracle in our lives, then He demands some sort of initiative from our part. The Zacchaeus story tells us that Jesus looked up and spoke to him. "Zacchaeus, come down. I must stay at your home tonight". He comes down and welcomes Jesus into his home. By entering Zacchaeus' house, Jesus gave back to his owner, the dignity that he had lost and restored his sense of self-worth. How would we respond to Jesus' demand, "I must stay at your house today?" For that, we have to come down from our own trees by abandoning anything that may keep us apart from Jesus.
